

COVE & KILCREGGAN LITERARY SOCIETY

Privacy Policy

Key Details

This privacy policy describes how the COVE & KILCREGGAN LITERARY SOCIETY protects and makes use of the information given to the Society by present and past members, enquirers for membership, providers of talks and other services to the Society.

Information provided will only be used in the ways described in this privacy policy.

For enquiries about this policy, please email contact@covekilcregganlitsoc.org.

Introduction

We gather and use certain information in order to offer and provide programmes of talks and other activities of the Society.

What data we gather

We may collect the following information.

- Name
- Address
- Telephone number
- Email address

How we use this data

Specifically, we may use this data:

- To contact enquirers for membership
- To contact present and past members for renewal of membership
- To contact present and past members to provide information on the current programme and other activities of the Society
- To contact potential providers of talks to the Society
- To contact vendors
- For our own internal records
- To provide names of Office bearers as necessary for enquiries to be directed to the Society, in printed form and in the website.
- To show names of providers of talks in the current printed programme of the Society
- To show names of providers of talks in the current and past programmes as published in the Society website and in addition:

- We show in photographic form, images of members either individually or in groups, on visits of the Society to places of interest, in either printed form or the website, for the purpose of promoting the Society and entry by new members.

Controlling data

We do not lease, distribute or sell the data provided by enquirers, present and past members, providers of talks and vendors. We hold this information securely, both physically and via password protection.

We will not give personal data to any third party other than as strictly necessary to perform our function as a Society.

Access to data

Enquirers, present and past members, providers of talks and vendors may have access to data held on them.

Cookies

We do not use cookies on our website.